

JACKSONVILLE BUSINESS JOURNAL

Upcoming Event

Business of Sports Summit
Time: 7:30 am - 12:00 pm
Place: Veterans Memorial Arena

Register See all events

Should fans be worried about the Jaguars moving to London?

Nov 4, 2014, 2:44pm EST

★ Save Article Order Reprints Print

Andrew Thurlow
Reporter-
Jacksonville Business Journal
Email | Twitter | Facebook | LinkedIn

View Photos

Dave Shopland

Dallas Cowboys v Jacksonville Jaguars NFL International Series at Wembley Stadium in London. 4/11/14, photo: DAVE SHOPLAND /NFL Dallas Cowboys arrive Gatwick Airport Tuesday Dez Bryant with Cowboys Fan

As the Jaguars prepare to play the second of four games in London, the sports world is abuzz with the idea that the team may be scoping out a new home, with everyone from the Washington Times to Financial Times hinting at the possibility the team might move overseas.

Despite some naysayers, the NFL is clearly interested in having a team in England.

So why won't it be the Jags?

Fox Sports has its list of reasons—including the Jags not being popular in London and the team's history back home. And, locally, some superfans say they're

Videos

Colleen Jones examines

Heilemann: Inside the

Jury Rejects Ellen Pao's

not worried.

"If you would have asked me a few years ago, it could have been a possibility. But today, I think they would be more likely to move to Los Angeles if anywhere else," said Charles Jimerson, an avid sports fan and attorney at Jimerson & Cobb in Jacksonville. "It's more of a natural fit because it's the second or third highest market in television."

That's not to say Jimerson is worried about an L.A. move: "In fact, it's just opposite," he said. "We've seen substantial investment in the community by way of localized project development and stadium refurbishment."

Cole Pepper, co-founder of WhitePepper Sports Marketing, said if an NFL team did decide to cross the pond it wouldn't be the Jaguars.

As a matter of fact, the league's stadium and finance committee recently talked about Oakland and St. Louis as potential candidates, he said: "They're definitely developing a fan base over there."

Nevertheless, Pepper said the idea of the NFL expanding its brand across the world is a fools-gold mentality.

"I don't think you're going to see a team move to London anytime soon. There are too many logistical issues, and I think the league has enough issues to deal with rather than trying to recreate the wheel," he said. "I think you'll see a team move to L.A. long before London."

If they did move to London, Jimerson recommends they channel their inner Austin Powers and rebrand to the "Shaguars." Or, maybe just the pronunciation, as in jah-yoo-er, like those pompous-sounding British commercials.

Andrew covers real estate, retail and sports business.

Industries: Sports Business

We Recommend

Justin Blackmon sells house for $470,000

More growth in store for St. Vincent's Clay County location

Corporate venues at The Players see early sellout

Promoted by Taboola

From Around The Web

Sponsored Links Advertisement

Get up to a $500 bonus with an Ally IRA
Get up to a $500 bonus with a qualifying deposit to an Ally IRA from outside Ally Bank.
Ally Bank

Barron's
Get full access to Barron's market-moving financial news and analysis whenever, wherever you want it
Barron's

Get Listed Here

Most Popular

1. Shad Khan says team isn't in running for L.A. for a reason
2. Passport application the break that led to Lantigua arrest
3. Inside the investigation that showed Jose Lantigua was alive
4. Mark Spain leaves Jacksonville to return to anchor desk
5. Corporate venues at The Players see early sellout
6. Moody Chisholm steps down as CEO of St. Vincent's HealthCare
7. The highest-paid government employees in Jacksonville
8. Mixed bag for business candidates in Tuesday election
9. Armada FC set to break attendance record at home opener
10. $1 million for USS Adams project in Florida House budget

Private company issues and opportunities: What to consider in 2015

Read the report on 12 key topics, or build your own report to set your 2015 agenda

Learn More.

Sponsored by

People on the Move

Travis Martin
Peoplr

Leigh Starnes
Family Nurturing Center of Florida

David Quinney
The Bailey Group

Belinda Barrett
ELM | Ervin Lovett Miller

Timothy Farrow
Glober Law Group

Vilma Consuegra
Acosta Sales & Marketing

Featured Jobs